Since the construction of the state road from Norwich to New London on the west side of the Thames river there has been extensive travel over it by automobiles, and many of the drivers have not been careful as to the rate of speed they were going. The result is that the road has been badly torn out from Trading Cove bridge to Mohegan gate, where the fast going automobiles and to the attention of inspector John Donovan, who has charge of the county roads, and he will start Monday morning putting that stretch of road into proper shape. He will have a steam roller there and for several days has been getting ready for the job, $400 having been expended already, and much more will be required to get it in shape.

The condition of the road has become so that it is dangerous for travel and the accident of this week near the witch hazel mill has caused the selection of the condition of the road building of 500 feet of macadam road for the state was rained on bout race day by the careless driving of the autoists who passed over it.

the extensive damage to the roadbed. The selectmen are to place constables on the road, and any violators of the law will be punished. The law reads that the officers may measure off an eighth of a mile on the highway, and if the speed limit is exceeded in that distance the evidence is sufficient to convict. By the law autos cannot be driven faster than 25 miles an hour, and that rate will be the limit to be allowed on the highway between here and New London hereafter.

For several days sand has been carted and piled along the section of the road which is to be repaired, together with tar kettles, and inspector Donovan will put men at work there Monday, and considers it will take most of the week to complete the job. As soon as it is repaired there will be three carloads of heavy asphalt oil
